Tarleton State University – Southwest Metroplex, an outreach teaching site of Tarleton State University, has operated programs serving the needs of Tarrant, Johnson and Parker Counties for over 30 years. Initial programs started in 1978 in the area of Medical Laboratory Science provide critically needed health care professionals for the rapidly growing Metroplex. Those programs were followed by cooperative programs with the Fort Worth ISD to offer an alternative teacher certification program to meet critical needs for teachers in 2000. Since that time, Tarleton has expanded program offerings at this location, to include a variety of programs in Education, Counseling, Business, Psychology, Industrial Engineering, and Criminal Justice. Programs include both master's level course work, and junior/senior level courses for baccalaureate degree completion. Baccalaureate degree completion programs are designed to build upon associate programs offered at Tarrant County Community College, Weatherford College and Hill College-Johnson County.

Tarleton – Southwest Metroplex has a diverse student population comprised mostly of working-adults seeking master's degrees and community college graduates or returning students seeking baccalaureate completion degrees. Classes are offered in the evenings, days and weekends to accommodate both part-time and full-time students. Advisors and support staff are available to assist with admission and degree plans.

Administrative offices for the Southwest Metroplex are located at 6777 Camp Bowie Boulevard, Fort Worth, Texas at the Hickman Building. Classrooms are located in Tarleton operated facilities at the Hickman Building in Fort Worth, the R.C. Schaffer Building in Fort Worth, and the Dora Lee Langdon Center in Granbury. In addition, classrooms are utilized at Weatherford College in Weatherford, Hill College in Cleburne, and Luella Merritt School-FWISD in Fort Worth.

Eight graduate level master's degree programs, eleven undergraduate degree programs and seven certification options are available through our Southwest Metroplex outreach teaching site at one or more of our classroom locations.
