Tarleton State University expressly discloses the following:

1. As a provider of teacher education programs, Tarleton State University must ensure its students demonstrate adherence to the Code of Ethics and Standard Practices for Texas Educators, which requires the observance of federal and state law. An arrest, indictment, conviction, and/or deferred adjudication may result in a student being dismissed from the program.
2. While Tarleton State University does not perform criminal history background checks, Texas public schools are permitted by state law to conduct criminal history background checks on a person intended for hire or a person who has requested a volunteer position. As a participant in field experiences or student teaching in a Texas public school, you will be subject to a criminal history background check and must be able to provide the documentation to run the check in order to continue in the program.
3. Admission of a student into the Tarleton State University Teacher Education Program and student participation in the program does not constitute any guarantee that the student will be accepted into a field experience or student teaching placement in a Texas public school. Failure to participate in field experiences may prevent a student from completing the Tarleton State University Teacher Education Program and obtaining teacher certification from the Texas State Board for Educator Certification.
4. While Tarleton State University does not perform criminal history background checks, the Texas Education Agency requests information regarding any previous arrest, indictment, conviction, and/or deferred adjudication. When applying for state certification, you will be subject to a criminal history background check by the Texas Education Agency. An applicant with a significant criminal history may be denied certification.
