INTERNSHIP REPORT

All students taking an internship class must turn in an in-depth report on their internship experience. This report should focus not only on what the student's duties were and how they were accomplished, but also on why these duties were performed in this manner. The educational value of an internship lies in the student's understanding of the business field that they have chosen.

The report should contain at least 5 sections. These sections should include:

General description. The student should include a brief history of the business, focusing on the concept, growth and development. The current status of the business should be detailed, especially as it relates to the student's area of interest. If possible, the student should discuss the goals and objectives of the business.

Specific operations. The student should present a detailed discussion of the specific components of the business that are related to the internship. These may include the marketing plan, nutrition program, breeding program, etc. Different operations are going to require differing components. The intern should focus on the operation or business that he/she served in.

Duties. The student should include a detailed summary of his/her duties while serving the internship. This section should include a discussion of what duties were performed, how they were performed, and why they were performed.

Evaluation. The student should provide an honest evaluation of the internship. Included should be discussions on the educational quality of the experience, as well as the practical aspects. A critique of the operation is also required.

Summary. The summary should include an overall look at the internship opportunity. The student should review the goals he/she had going into the internship and evaluate how well these goals were met. An indication of which courses helped prepare the student for this experience should be included, and a honest indication of suggested class changes is beneficial.

Diagrams, charts, layouts, etc., would also be beneficial to the report. Creation of an appendix would probably be very beneficial to the report.
