Once you complete your academic program, you have a 60-day grace period which you can use to travel in the U.S. and prepare to depart, apply to the United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) for a change of class of admission, apply for post-completion Optional Practical Training, or apply and be accepted to a new academic program starting the next available term and within 5 months of program completion. Please check which of the following best describes your post-graduation plans.

- I am leaving the U.S.
- I am applying for a new program at Tarleton State University which will start the next available term.
- I am applying for a new program at another U.S. SEVP certified institution which will start the next available term.
- I am applying for Post-Completion Optional Practical Training (OPT).
- I am applying to USCIS for a change of status.
- Other (please explain)

Comments:

Remember: You must either leave the U.S., be accepted to a new program, file for OPT, or file for a new immigration status before the end of the 60-day grace period. Unless otherwise authorized, staying beyond your 60-day grace period is a violation of status and will result in the accumulation of unlawful presence. You may not exit and reenter using your F-1 visa during your grace period.
